Enterprise Employee Onboarding Guide

Day One

New employees should complete HR orientation, receive required equipment, activate their company account, and review essential policies.

Accounts

IT provisions required accounts based on the employee's role. New employees must complete multi-factor authentication setup where required.

Security Training

Employees must complete assigned security and compliance training within the timeframe communicated by the company.

Team Introduction

Managers should introduce new employees to their team, explain responsibilities, and provide information about recurring meetings and communication channels.

First Week

Employees should review team documentation, development or business processes, project priorities, and relevant internal systems.

First Thirty Days

Managers and employees should discuss early goals, training needs, access requirements, and questions about role expectations.

Support

Questions about HR policies should go to Human Resources. Technical access and device issues should go to IT support.

Internal company reference document — sample data for an Enterprise Knowledge Assistant.